

Philip Ross

Leading author, consultant and global commentator on the future of work, workplace innovation and emerging technology.

Philip Ross, CEO of the Cordless Group, has written the three global best selling books on the workplace (all co-authored with Jeremy Myerson):

He has also contributed to a number of other books including the Corporate Fool and the Responsible Workplace.

In 1994 Philip founded Cordless Consultants, wrote and published The Cordless Office Report and in 1996 launched UNWIRED Ventures Ltd, the Knowledge and Events division of the Cordless Group.

He has worked with organisations such as Ernst & Young, Allen & Overy, GlaxoSmithKline, Cisco, McKinsey & Co, Nokia, Standard Chartered Bank, PricewaterhouseCoopers, HSBC, Jones Lang LaSalle and Ericsson on future concepts and opportunities for innovation.

Philip is a regular keynote speaker at conferences around the world. He has spoken at conferences including the Wall Street Journal Europe CEO Forum on Converging Technologies, alt.office in the USA and CoreNet Global events in Beijing, Melbourne and Auckland.

In his Innovative Workshops, he helps organisations develop new workspace strategies. Philips experience brings:

- Unparalleled global knowledge of work space innovation case studies, benefits and enablers, drivers and results - allowing knowledge sharing and benchmarking
- Ideas and drivers of change, from the expectations of the next generation to successful strategies for implementing change
- Technology enablers and drivers of change – a view of the key technologies that are being adopted by organisations to enable workplace innovations, together with a roadmap to allow future proofing

“The Cordless Group helped us to challenge our assumptions and to paint a picture for where technology would take work in 10 years time” John McCorquodale, Ernst & Young

“The Cordless Group are one of the top global authorities on workplace innovation”, CoreNet Global
