

Tim Venable

Tim Venable is Editor of CoreNet Global's The Leader magazine. He also serves as Director for CoreNet Global's Discovery Forums program.

Venable joined IDRC in 1989 and spent more than 10 years writing for Site Selection magazine, its official publication. During that span, he wrote hundreds of articles on corporate real estate, site selection and economic development. Before joining IDRC, he worked in retail real estate and site selection for Jackson, Miss.-based JFM Inc., a convenience store franchiser, and for two state-level economic development agencies – the Mississippi Dept. of Economic Development and the Mississippi Research and Development Center.

He joined The IDRC Foundation, the research and learning arm of IDRC, in 2000. CoreNet Global was formed in the 2002 integration of IDRC and NACORE.

Venable earned a master's degree in economic development from the University of Southern Mississippi in 1984. He received a bachelor's degree in American History, with minors in Political Science and French, from Troy State (Ala.) University in 1982.

